ditions that prevailed during the fruitful session of 1866. Sir HENRY PARKES now has Sir JOHN ROBERTSON as his colleague. Then he was in alliance with Sir JAMES MARTIN. It is a curious coincidence that, whilst Sir JOHN ROBERTSON has twice gone into the Council when that House was about to be asked to pass a land-bill, Sir HENRY PARKES has twice obtained the co-operation of a former political antagonist before undertaking the amendment of the law of public education.

In truth, however, the term coalition Ministry can only be applied to these cases in a modified sense, and for want of a word that would more accurately describe the situation. When, in England, a Government has been formed by bringing together members of the two great historical parties into which the political world was so long divided, the term could be used appropriately, in its ordinary significance. But here, where there is no such clearly marked cleavage, and parties have been formed and held together by personal attractions and repulsions rather than by any broad and general antagonism of principle and tendency, the union in one Ministry of men who have belonged to different parties is not so much a coalition as a re-arrangement. The only reason for borrowing a word that has a different signification in English politics is that with us, when men who have been holding prominent or leading positions on opposite sides, agreed to act together, a certain portion of their respective associates or followers generally think proper to do likewise. In appearance there is a coalition of parties that have been opposed. In reality there is little, if anything, more than the establishment of a better understanding amongst members of the same party or the same school, who have, for personal reasons, estranged from one another. Up to the point of forming the so-called coalition, their energies have been employed in answering each other's policy; from that point they agree to co-operate. If they tried to show why they had been opposed, and again, why they suddenly ceased their opposition, the account, given with candour, would itself require explanation. The simple fact would probably be that they might have worked together throughout, if personal interests, or prejudices, or prepossessions, had not interfered to prevent their doing so. Sir HENRY PARKES and Sir JOHN ROBERTSON are now colleagues, but it is not so much because they have "confessed" as because they have found it more expedient to work together than to work separately. They might have worked together at almost any time within the last quarter of a century if the good of the public rather than their own feelings or convenience had been studied.

When we say that the fruitfulness of the sessions in 1866 and the beginning of 1880 has been attributable in part to the existence of coalition Ministries, this is only a sort of technical way of describing the circumstances of the times. In both cases, gentlemen commanding Parliamentary influence, instead of wasting time and checking progress in opposing each other, agreed to give each other all the assistance that was practicable, and members of less note who had been following their respective leadership on different sides of the House, agreed to follow them in sitting together upon the one side. The sum and substance of the whole matter is that there would be comparatively little difficulty in procuring both short sessions and fruitful sessions at all times if leading members of the House, and the rank and file generally could be induced to study more exclusively the public interest, and to abstain from playing at what is mischievous party government, when the materials for the real thing are wanting. We may yet see well-defined parties in the country, but until that change comes, it might well be always have a "coalition Ministry," if that term can be used when there has been little or nothing more than the shaking of personal differences, which ought never to have prevented co-operation.

The re-assembling of the Queensland Parliament has been signalized by an episode of more than ordinary, and of somewhat unpleasant interest. At the earliest moment permitted by the forms of the Legislative Assembly, the leader of the Opposition, Mr. GUERRIN, Q.C., presented a petition from an ex-Treasurer of Queensland, Mr. HEMMANT, who has, during some years, been resident in London. In tempestuous but significant terms, this petition conveyed to the House some allegations sufficiently striking, and prayed inquiry. Briefly stated, these allegations are to the effect that the Government of Queensland in January last invited tenders for the supply, and for the conveyance to the colony of 16,000 tons of steel rails; that the invitations to tender were addressed only to a limited number of firms, and that the company which obtained the contract numbered among its eight shareholders, Mr. W. H. ASHWELL, the engineer in London to the Government of Queensland, that officer being also one of the original directors of the company. Further, the petition represents that the company was not even a manufacturing concern, and was actually procuring from a firm of rail-makers, who had not been favoured with an invitation to tender, for about £1 per ton, the rails which it had contracted to supply to the Government of Queensland at 29 lbs. 6d. per ton. In addition to these representations the petitioner further affirms that such rails were, not long ago, procurable at 25 per ton. With respect to the arrangements for shipping, the petition is still more trenchant in its text. The conditions of the tenders for this service were that only such as proffered full ships—that is to say, ships making up their cargoes exclusively of the rails—would be entertained. It is stated that Messrs. McILWRAITH, McEACHERN, and Co., were the successful tenderers; that Messrs. THOMAS McILWRAITH, the Premier, A. H. PALMER, the Colonial Secretary of Queensland, and Mr. ASHWELL, the consulting engineer already mentioned, are registered as part owners of shares in several of the vessels of Messrs. McILWRAITH, McEACHERN, and Co.'s fleet; and that the firm have been permitted to ship the rails in other than full ships, an economic advantage which, if allowed when tenders were called, would probably have enabled the Government to procure lower offers from other tenderers than were sent in.

There is here a catalogue of allegations sufficiently formidable to justify the concluding prayer that inquiry may be made; and whatever the petition may have lacked in point and directness was supplied without stint by Mr. GRIFFITH in commenting upon the document. The leader of the Opposition did not mince his language, nor sparcissim. The petition he had presented amounted, he remarked, almost to an impeachment of the PREMIER. He narrated how, before tenders had been called at all, a broker named Cooper had made contracts with certain rail-making firms for rails intended for the Government of Queensland. These manufacturers were actually furnished with specifications of the rails corresponding with the requirements of the Queensland lines. Mr. COOPER being, so to speak, a nobody, had been unable to induce firms to undertake orders for quantities aggregating 16,000 tons on his own account, and therupon had brought to the front a Mr. McILWRAITH, described as an Australian merchant, and "presumed" by Mr. GRIFFITH to be a brother of the PREMIER. These anticipatory contracts were made at about £6 per ton; it was the rails manufactured under these contracts which the Queensland Government was receiving through the successful tenderers, at 29 lbs. 6d. per ton, and Mr. GUERRIN declared himself determined to discover who it was that pocketed the difference between the two prices, amounting in the aggregate to nearly £30,000. In the running commentary with which Mr. GRIFFITH accompanied this enlargement of the text of the petition he presented, he was not altogether consistent. At one stage he remarked that he did not think the PREMIER had been guilty of more than an error of judgment; but as he warned with his theme, he dealt in thinly qualified accusations of "very grave mal-administration," spoke of "a fraud upon the country," drew parallels with cases of glaring corruption in connection with Government freights to India, which he quoted, and indulged in passing references to the Tammany Ring.

The reply of the Queensland PREMIER to the tangible points in the above array of accusations was prompt, categorical, and on the whole convincing. He had gone home prepared to buy some 40,000 tons of rails, but finding on his arrival that the market for these commodities was in a disturbed and excited state, he had contented himself with taking steps to procure only as much as would be absolutely and immediately required—one 15,000 tons. The limitation of invitations to tender was in accordance with the practice of the Agent-General's advice, and adopted partly in compliance with suggestions offered by Mr. HAMILTON, secretary to the Agent-General. The lowest tender, the one subsequently accepted, was higher than Mr. McILWRAITH liked, and before any decision was arrived at he made a pause, and caused to be instituted special inquiry into the likelihood of prices keeping up or descending. The Agent-General was instructed to inquire, Mr. McILWRAITH made personal researches, and Mr. ASHWELL, the Consulting-Engineer, was called on for a report, which the PREMIER laid before the Assembly. The result was a formal recommendation by the Agent-General that the lowest tender should be accepted, and accepted it accordingly was. With respect to the tenders for shipping, Mr. HAMILTON's views had differed from the PREMIER's. The former held that when the Government had iron freight to bestow they should not let it by contract, but manage to get it taken cheap as dead-weight, as opportunity offered. Mr. McILWRAITH, however, slighted this plan, and decided that the straightforward way of doing business was to invite tenders from shipowners. He showed that tenders had been invited from all the firms connected with colonial shipping, not one connected with the Australian trade having been omitted; that Mr. HAMILTON scheduled the tenders and wrote across the lowest, "McILWraith, McEacherne, and Co." accepted. Mr. McILWRAITH was himself not in London during the transaction, and Mr. MACALISTER, the Agent-General, simply accepted Mr. HAMILTON's schedule and recommendation. The position borne by the last-named official in these transactions is significant, because he had not been working harmoniously with his chief, the Agent-General, and very shortly afterwards addressed to Mr. MACALISTER a letter marked "Private and Confidential," in which the charges contained in the subsequent petition of Mr. HEMMANT were substantially conveyed. This letter was by the Agent-General communicated to the PREMIER, who immediately insisted that it could not be recognized as either private or confidential, and ordered an inquiry forthwith. The connection of Mr. ASHWELL with the successful tenderers for the rails was investigated, with the result of showing that officer held or had held £1000 of scrip paid up to £300 in the company, the capital of which was nominally £100,000; that he had never acted as a director; and that, as the company was a public one under limited liability, his position was not in contravention of his official obligations. With respect to the tenders for rails, the inquiry clearly showed that the successful tenderers were supplying at 29 lbs. 6d. rails which they were procuring at £6. The explanation was simply that they had bought speculatively when the market was depressed, and had placed their contract after a determined rise had taken place. The fact, the PREMIER stated, did not distress him. The colony had got the rails at the lowest rate offered at the time when it came into the market, and he submitted contemporaneous reports, published in the journals of the iron trade, showing that the ruling prices had been higher than those paid by the Government. With regard to his interest in the vessel owned by Messrs. McILWRAITH, McEACHERN, and Co., he had held shares for fifteen years past, chiefly as settlements and provision for his children. There might be two or three hundred co-partners in the affair, which was a limited liability concern, but among them all he knew but one, his brother. He had no control in the management, no concern in his brother's contracts. He commented with some bitterness upon the fact that the charges had emanated from Mr. HEMMANT, a personal adversary and political opponent, at the prompting of Mr. HAMILTON, a displaced servant of the Government, and with deep resentment of the course pursued by the leader of the Opposition, in proceeding to extremities upon an ex parte statement, and, instead of seeking, anticipating inquiry.

The whole question, which is obviously of great importance as respects the purity of political life, has been remitted to a select committee, and pending that inquiry we abstain from anything more than a narrative statement drawn from the parliamentary speeches of the principal accuser and the principal defendant.

That those who want publicans' licences should exercise their ingenuity to secure them is natural enough; but it is not so easy to understand the reason why magistrates are sometimes so anxious to put themselves out of the way to provide that these licences are granted. The all but universal complaint has been that the city and suburbs of Sydney have a far larger number of public-houses than there is any occasion for; and on this as well as on other grounds there has been a general demand for an improved Licensing Act. The PREMIER has guaranteed the early introduction of a comprehensive measure in the direction of licensing reform. Meanwhile, however, Parliament has passed a Liquor Licences Suspensions Bill, which found its way through both Houses some days before the Session closed. The fact that such a measure had got through Parliament should have been sufficient to curb the licensing propensities of any body of magistrates. But not only had the bill referred to received the assent of Parliament, on Saturday last it obtained the assent of the GOVERNOR, and so became law. On Tuesday, however, as has been reported, a number of magistrates, including, it seems, Mr. O'CONNOR, one of the members for West Sydney, assembled at the Newtown Police Court, and recommended the granting of licenses for three new public-houses for the suburbs. It is stated that each of the applications was opposed by the police, and that at least one of them was resisted on grounds which ought to have been deemed sufficient. The whole of the licensees, however, were recommended, and only in opposition to the representations of the police, but in contravention of the law, it may, be pleaded that the magistrates referred to were not aware that the bill had received the Viceregal assent, but, on the other hand, it is possible that they might have been made aware of the fact if they had taken the trouble to make inquiries. Even if the bill had not actually received the GOVERNOR's assent, the proceeding at the Newtown Police Court would not have been a creditable one. The recommending of these licenses under the circumstances cannot be looked upon as other than a rush to evade a legal enactment, for purposes which, to say the least, were of a doubtful character. The Newtown magistrate may be quoted as a justification of the passing of a suspensory bill. Had such a bill not been introduced, there would, no doubt, have been a rush of applicants for licenses in anticipation of a new licensing measure next year. It is to be regretted that any respectable magistrate should have felt it their duty to lead themselves into such a questionable experiment as the one we reported yesterday.

The GLADSTONE Government has undertaken to try to deal with the question of burial grounds—a question which has been the source of endless bitterness between the National Church and the outlying sects. It is, in fact, only one phase of the many-sided Church and State question, and is evidently drifting to a settlement in harmony with the doctrine of national supremacy which has slowly been working its way to the front. The favourite doctrine amongst the supporters of those who uphold the rights of the Church is that the burial grounds are Church property, and that, therefore, Church authorities are exclusively entitled to regulate their use. But the assertion overlooks the historical and fundamental fact that they only became Church property by the act of the Parliament, and that the Church has since been a national agent for religious purposes. If it carries out its trustship to the full, religious bitterness and discord, which it falls in one of its first duties, because if the national agents for the promotion of religion promote hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness, they fail in their mission. In this case the State is entitled to intervene, and to instruct its agents to adopt a more liberal and conciliatory course. This is really the essence of the whole Burials question; and the solution of the Government wishes to bring about is to make the national cemeteries available generally, so as to give us a greater frontage to the avenue. The Executive Committee has entered into a contract for enclosing the courts, which work is to be completed in ten days. The general arrangements are most satisfactory, and every facility is offered by the Melbourne Executive Commissioners and Mr. LEVY, the secretary.

We learn from our Californian files, that Dr. BEEDE, so-well known in this colony and Victoria, in connection with wine-growing, has been appointed secretary to the Viticultural Commission at a high salary. The commission is composed of the principal scientific agriculturists in the State, and will take in hand the whole question of wine-growing on the Pacific coast.

A new Sunday-school in connection with St. Matthew's Church, of England, Windsor, was opened on Thursday by Dean Cowper, of Sydney. The event was celebrated by a tea and public meeting in the school. The weather was unfavourable as rain set in, and somewhat marred the proceedings, many being prevented from attending. Nevertheless, there was a large gathering. The Rev. F. STRETTON occupied the chair, and the meeting was addressed by Dean Cowper, Rev. C. F. GARNEY, and others. The choir of St. Matthew's rendered excellent music. The building is situated in a new street, and is a substantial brick structure, capable of seating 500 people. The cost, with the fittings and ground, is £1000. A considerable debt remains to be cleared off.

At the opening of the Grammar School, Windsor, the Rev. K. KEAN announced his deep regret at the death of the R. Driver, M.L.A. His kindness and liberality was well-known by every boy and resident of Windsor.

The building is situated in a new street, and is a substantial brick structure, capable of seating 500 people. The cost, with the fittings and ground, is £1000. A considerable debt remains to be cleared off.

At the opening of the Grammar School, Windsor, the Rev. K. KEAN announced his deep regret at the death of the R. Driver, M.L.A. His kindness and liberality was well-known by every boy and resident of Windsor.

The weather was unfavourable as rain set in, and somewhat marred the proceedings, many being prevented from attending. Nevertheless, there was a large gathering. The Rev. F. STRETTON occupied the chair, and the meeting was addressed by Dean Cowper, Rev. C. F. GARNEY, and others. The choir of St. Matthew's rendered excellent music. At a meeting of the Narrabri Coursing Club, it was unanimously decided to hold another hunt on July 21st and August 2.

BANKS' ROWING CLUB.

The Banks' Rowing Club is experiencing some little difficulty in obtaining a site suitable for a boathouse, &c. Many situations from the shed are obtainable, but their distance from town is too great to admit of any of these being adopted. As soon as a desirable site is selected, the erection of a shed and the purchase of necessary boats will be at once proceeded with.

FOOTBALL.

A match has been arranged for this afternoon on the Waratah ground, Moore Park, for a number of players who have given up playing the Victoria game. The contest will not be between the two clubs, but some of the Waratah and Burwood players have consented to take part and will be assisted by old Victorians. The sides will probably consist of the following players:-

Waratah.—Barney Bell, Mr. J. D. Butler, Dr. G. E. Hedges, Howard Macnamara, Martin, Newing, O'Brien, Pike, Rubb, Sidney, Usher, Walker, Waller, Williams. Burwood team : Bell, Carter, Campbell, Church, Fraser, Gray, J. McLean, A. McLean, M. A. Maclean, Pall, Peacock, P. Peacock, T. Peacock, T. S. Peacock, W. Peacock, J. Wilkinson, F. Wilkinson, Wines, and Frazer. As the above lists include the names of many first-class players, the match is likely to prove a very interesting one (provided that both sides have mastered their rules), and may be accepted as a fair test of the merit of the game as played in the various codes.

The Walshaw and Balmain clubs meet also this afternoon on Moore Park, and the first fifteen of the St. Leonards Football Club will try conclusions with the Orientals on the St. Leonards reserve. The University Club proceed to Parramatta to play King's School.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I am glad to find in your issue of this morning a letter advocating the introduction of the English Association game into New South Wales, and I am a little surprised that some old English player has not made the suggestion before. I have no reason to think from conversations I have had on the subject that the game can possibly be started in Australia, as it is now, without any players, but with the public. Unfortunately, a very general misapprehension appears to exist as to the nature of the game, a great many people I have spoken to evidently confusing it with the Victorian Association game, whereas the game has not got up to the same degree of commonness.

As to the chance of popularity, let any one read "Bell's Life," the account of International or club contests in Glasgow, Sheffield, London, &c., witnessed often by from 10,000 to 12,000 spectators. It is there that the two great games of association and football in England, with its principle, football as a game for feet and for hands, had long existed in the Eton and Harrow games. At the present time the football players of Great Britain, playing under Rugby and Association rules, are about equally popular, and the world seems to be with those interested in the footie with the other.

With the exception of the footie with the other, we see that of late the value of good dribbling has become universally acknowledged in the Rugby game. I feel that we are rather late in writing in advocacy of the English Association game, as the first few games have been played with Rugby rules, appear to have committed them selves to the adoption of Victorian rules. Nevertheless, there must be many old English and Scotch Association players, or old Eton and Harrow men, who are desirous of seeing a new game introduced, and who would make an effort to introduce it; and I am quite sure that the principle of the game, which forbids the use of the hands, except by a goalkeeper, and does away with scrummaging, collaring, &c., will command itself to a very large section of this community.

The game, however, is something else, unashamed and unorganized combination, and in fact may almost be said to be the chief art of the game. In the brief space of a letter it is impossible to say all that one would be himself in the introduction of the rules of the English Association; but I hope that, since at the present time a radical change is to be made in the rules of the Victorian Association, the public generally will give the matter a more thorough investigation than it has yet received before committing themselves to the Victorian game. I should be willing to communicate with gentlemen willing to assist in starting a club of the English Association, and if the result of the whole question is to be left to me, I am, &c.
